CHANNEL 8 EXCLUSIVE: CHIEF BELIEVES 'BLACKWATER' COIN IS A FAKE

Sources inside the Atlanta Police Department tell Channel 8 that Chief Elxa Jackson privately believes the black onyx coins found with two murder victims this month are counterfeits, and that the killings may be the work of "a third party posing as the Blackwater Syndicate."

The assessment appears in a confidential command-staff document reviewed by Channel 8's source.

Updated 2:30 p.m.: An APD spokeswoman said the department "does not comment on internal documents or ongoing investigations." Asked whether the Chief would seek the source of the leak, the spokeswoman said, "The Chief is focused on catching a killer."

>> POLL: If the coins are fake, who's behind the killings?

A rival gang — 29% · Someone framing Blackwater — 41% · Blackwater itself, covering its tracks — 22% · The Smilleys (just kidding) (not kidding) — 8%

'FAKE COIN' LEAK ROCKS APD

Chief's private theory reaches TV within an hour of closed-door meeting

By Renee Holloway, Staff Writer

A confidential assessment by Police Chief Elxa Jackson, that the "Onyx Coin" killings may be the work of someone framing the Blackwater Syndicate, was broadcast Thursday morning less than half an hour after the department's top commanders reviewed it behind closed doors.

The leak comes one day after Deputy Chief Warren Hughes told the City Council he was "not in the loop" on the Blackwater investigation.

On Thursday evening, the department announced that Hughes has been named APD's liaison to a federal organized-crime task force. A spokeswoman called it "a routine assignment that reflects the Deputy Chief's experience."

"That's either the dumbest thing I've ever seen a chief do or the smartest," said one retired APD commander. "Ask me in a month."

Seven.

Darlings, it's over. At 9:36 Thursday night, the Chairman of Donohue Global Holdings slept in his own bed for the first time in a week. My little bird in the Manor kitchen says he carried his own pillow down the hall "like a boy going to camp."

At breakfast, Madame Simone served him cake. White buttercream. A blue "7." At seven-thirty in the morning. The Chairman ate it. With dignity.

Also: A little bird in Lindbergh tells me the peonies are still alive.

SERVED

- Keel & Associates, 11:08 AM. The brand-new two-billion-dollar broker was served with court papers at her desk by a man in a Braves windbreaker. Our source (three cubicles down, spray tan) says the envelope said "Family Division." We won't say more. There's a baby involved. Even we have lines.

- The Chief kept her mole. WBKG ran her secret "fake coin" theory at 10:04. By 6:43, the deputy chief who "wasn't in the loop" was named FBI liaison. CrestWatchers, either she doesn't know it was him, or she knows exactly who it was and she's going to make him carry her mail. We know which one we'd bet on.
- Seven nights. One cake. The Chairman is home. The lady of the house has retired the Washington pearls. The dowager, we're told, is "insufferable."
- The Olson girl got home at 3:07 AM. Her daddy was waiting on the stairs. No yelling. Our source says that was worse.

Some personal things happened today. I'm not writing about them here. This page is for Dee.

Here's what's for Dee: Ms. Mims is still coming tomorrow. Four o'clock. Mama made two pound cakes, because she said she didn't know if Ms. Mims likes lemon or plain. Daddy's taking the afternoon off from Route 71 for the first time in eleven years.

A friend told me today to "let a judge say it." She meant something else. But I've been thinking about it for Dee too.

For three years I've been the only one saying it. "He didn't run away. He didn't leave us. Something happened to him." I've said it on this page 157 times. I counted.

Tomorrow somebody official is going to sit at my mother's table and listen.

Let somebody else say it for a while.

grady_nurse_lo (Loretta Divine): Lemon AND plain. And sweet potato, in case.

E.O.S.: 157 times. Every one of them counted. See you tomorrow night. <3 northside_nanny: Ms. Mims came to see me today. She listened for an hour. She wrote everything down. She's the real thing.

cascadecutz: route 71 is my bus. your daddy is the nicest driver in the city. tell him the kid with the headphones says hey wiseblood_71: God sees what's hidden. And sometimes He sends a woman with a notepad.

ConspiracyKeith: I SAID IT ON JANUARY 4TH. SOMEBODY IS FRAMING BLACKWATER. I have the timestamp. I want my apology in writing.

ATLien_4Life: keith... i'm sorry. you were right. please don't make this your whole personality

ConspiracyKeith: too late

SouthsideSaint_78: if the coins are fake then who killed lamar and big e?? that's the question nobody on TV is asking HonestAbe_ATL: Or Blackwater made fake coins so they could kill people and say "it wasn't us." Did anybody think of that?

Mama_Deas_Biggest_Fan: blackwater paid lamar's widow's mortgage. you don't pay the mortgage of a man you killed HonestAbe_ATL: You do if you're smart.

WestEndWill: whoever's framing them better pray blackwater doesn't find him first. because if the police find him he gets a lawyer. if blackwater finds him he gets a river

ATLien_4Life: will that's DARK

WestEndWill: i'm just saying what everybody on campbellton road is saying Subject: Who leaked the Chief's memo?

Posted by FultonDem_Daryl — 1/13/05 12:40 PM

FultonDem_Daryl: Five commanders in the room. Twenty-three minutes later it's on Channel 8. Somebody's getting fired.

RetiredAPD_Sarge: Nobody's getting fired. You don't fire a leak your first month. You learn from it.

GA_Taxpayer1952: Hughes. It's obviously Hughes. He told the Council she keeps him out of the loop and the next morning her memo's on TV.

RetiredAPD_Sarge: And that night she makes him FBI liaison. Think about that for a minute.

FultonDem_Daryl: ...oh.

RetiredAPD_Sarge: Yeah. "Oh." That girl's grandfather built half this city. Her father's the best defense lawyer in the South. She learned chess before she learned to drive.
